LIME ANY TIME, SAYS P M A

Farmers of Appomattox County are advised to lime their land any time now even though it may be some time yet before winter cover crops are needed. Bennett Harding, chairman of the PMA County Committee says lime benefits land most when it has a chance to become thoroughly mixed after several cultivations.

The chairman added that taking delivery of lime at this time of year instead of in spring helps to spread out the operating load at the lime plant.

It's also about time for farmers to begin making arrangements for practices which they plan to carry out this fall.

He suggests that farmers not delay in making reports of practices already performed which qualify for payment under the 1950 Agricultural Conservation Program.

The P. M. A. Office, which is now located in the office building across the street from the Food Locker, is ready to accept reports on eligible soil building practices, such as the use of lime, phosphate, mixed fertilizers, permanent pasture seeding, and contour strip cropping.

PRODUCE FOR DEMAND; DECLARES VPI SPECIALIST

It's time for Virginia to stop decrying farm surpluses, and start producing for market demand.

Dr. J. L. Baxton, Extension marketing specialist at V. P. I., points to sheep, wool, oats, alfalfa hay, and alfalfa leaf meal, as among the deficit farm crops in Virginia.

For instance, Dr. Maxton says, Virginia needs alfalfa leaf meal in quantities of hundreds of carloads for use in mixing feeds for an expanding poultry industry.

At present this alfalfa leaf meal is being bought from other states.

As for alfalfa hay—the production is severely hampered, Dr. Maxton says, by the "farmer who gets on a tractor seat after hooking to a mower, and stops only when the field is mowed—regardless of acreage."

As a result of this practice, Virginia is making some of the "poorest hay possible, and is losing several million dollars in hay value," Dr. Maxton says.

Only the acreage of hay which can be readily handled and properly saved shoud be cut at one time.

Maxton also believes that hay dehydrator installations particularly in areas with large acreages of alfalfa - might pay off for Virginia farmers.

Urges Building of Soil Resources

Stock-piling fertility reserves in the nation's farmland will be the aim of the 1951 Agricultural Conservation Program father than using the reserves to produce already abundant supplies of cash crops, the Production and Marketing Administration said this week.

R. L. Beck, according to R. B. Bridgforth, State PMA head, summed up the thinking of a state technical committee which met in Richmond last week to consider conservation practices for next year's ACP program.

The committee, which is composed of various state and federal agricultural agencies, met to select practices most needed in Virginia and to draw up specifications for each. Among the practices considered were the use of liming materials, superphosphate and potash; seeding cover crops of legumes and grasses; small grain; stripcropping, contour planting, terracing, and sod waterways; open and tile drainage; pasture development and forest improvement; and establishment of farm ponds.

Farmers who carry out conservation practices under ACP in accordance with specifications may earn up to 60 per cent of the out-of-pocket costs of the practice.

FATHER DARKLEAF

By The Editor

Due to changes in schedules to provide for broadcasting of the world series baseball games, the regular Appomattox County News broadcast of Calvin Robinson, usually heard at 11:30 A. M. Saturday's on WWOD, Lynchburg, will not be heard this week. It is planned to resume the program later this month or probably at a different time. Announcement of resumption will be made. Mr. Robinson's broadcast at 7:15 P. M. Fridays will be continued until further notice.

Now we have seen a Siamese fight. We did not have to go to the State Fair to see it, either. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Moore, of Route 4, came into our office last Friday and brought an egg produced by their hen. It was a double-header, two perfected eggs joined together in the same twin fashion. We are always delighted when our friends come by to show us what goes on over on the farm!"

A big store had an exhibit of interior decorating. Five rooms were furnished as samples, and done in five different colors. Little Henry went through the blue room, red room, green room, buff room and white room, and they asked him his choice. It was important to get Henry's reaction. So Little Henry, sized off, said he liked the blue room best of all. Here was something of im portance! So, they asked Little Henry to tell them just why he preferred the blue room to the others. He said: "Because that is the one with the popcorn on the table.

In requestion again the same cooperation, Colonel Woodson revealed that past experience has shown about 25 per cent of the vehicles inspected are rejected for defective headlights, with defective brakes second at 20 per cent and other defective lights at 16 per cent. Steering defects were disclosed in about six per cent. He pointed out that efficient lights are more important now than ever with fall and winter approaching and increasing hours of darkness. Proper brakes, he observed, are a "must" as this same darkness obscures objects and thus gives the driver less distance in which to stop his car since he does not see danger as quickly as in daylight.

In closing, Colonel Woodson warned that there can be no extension of the period since 2,000 approved stations and 9,000 certified mechanics will be available.

S. ahead 7 to 0. In the second quarter Henry Doss intereepted a Randolph-Henry pass and returned it 65 yards and a touchdown.
